Practice tip

The high register of an A-NAF needs more breath support than the lower register — don't overblow, but commit firmly to each note. The D6 in the second phrase is the highest note in the songbook; aim for it gently and let it bloom rather than pushing it.

The dotted halves at every phrase end are the soul of the tune. Don't truncate — sustain to the end of your breath, then take a fresh breath before the next phrase. The breath itself is the rhythm.
